- f. Charities being organized.
- g. Mothers' pensions.
- h. Workingmen's insurance.
- i. Prohibition.
- 8. Federal Activity in the State.
 - a. Extent.
 - i. From postoffice to specialized bureaus.
 - ii. Enormous aggregate of men and money used.
 - b. New work added from year to year.
 - c. Embodies significant change in government.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.—This last installment of the Northwestern History Syllabus is the most difficult one for which to suggest a working bibliography. The time is recent and the materials for study are scattered. There is one big advantage, however, in the element of recent time. Many witnesses of, and participants in, the events are still living. Thy may be interviewed. The studies thus made will be constructive as well as interesting.

Government Reports.—In most large libraries the Public Documents of the Federal Government are available. There are also many Government Reports and pamphlets not always included in the larger series. When these refer to postoffices, light houses, life-saving stations, national forests, assay offices, Indian reservations and the many other forms of Federal activity in the State, it is obvious that some help may be obtained from them in this study. It is slow picking, for in most cases the information is given by district or by project and rarely is it given by States.

HINES, REV. H. K.—An Illustrated History of the State of Washington, published by The Lewis Publishing Company, Chicago, 1893. In this large book, Chapter XXXIX, pages 279-283, will be found to apply on this particular subject. The chapter is entitled: "Washington at the World's Fair," meaning the World's Columbian Exposition.

LIVING PARTICIPANTS.—Every community has some men and women who have personal knowledge of the facts of recent State history. Every fact obtained from them and recorded in these studies will have a value for the future workers in the field of State history.

Luhn, Adjutant William L.—Official History of the Operations of the First Washington Infantry, U. S. V., in the Campaign in the Philippine Islands. There are 117 pages in this record. It appears as an addendum to Karl Irving Faust's "Campaigning in the Philippines," published by The Hicks-Judd Company, San Francisco, 1899. The work is abundantly illustrated. Adjutant Luhn says that through the courtesy of Colonel John H. Wholley he was permitted to use the official records of the regiment in compiling the history.

MEANY, EDMOND S.—Governors of Washington, published by the Printing Department, University of Washington, Seattle, 1915. This little book contains brief biographical sketches of all the governors from the beginning of the Territory to the present time.

MEANY, EDMOND S.—History of the State of Washington. The last chapters of this book deal with the theme of this syllabus. There is probably no other place where there can be found a study of the Federal activity in the State of Washington.

Newspapers.—Files of newspapers published in this State are saved in most cases and when available for the time covered will be found most useful in such a study.