Before little Doris Lamping, great granddaughter of Arthur A. Denny, principal donor of the land, unveiled the tablet, Prof. Edmond S. Meany gave an address on the history of the land and the University leading up to the building of the great hotel. He complimented the Daughters of Pioneers on their service to the future in thus marking a site of such historic importance.

An Honor for Vancouver

The memory of Captain George Vancouver has been honored in the place of his birth by the naming of a new road.

In this Quarterly for October, 1924, there was published a review of Vancouver and His Great Voyage by G. H. Anderson. In acknowledging a copy of the review the author, who is Borough Accountant, writes from Town Hall, King's Lynn, England: "I am pleased to say that the suggestion I made as to naming the new road has been adopted and every day I now have the gratification of walking through 'Vancouver Avenue'."

Two Washington Centennials

The year 1925 should be interesting to the citizens of the State of Washington on account of two centennials. Mr. Oliphant mentions one of them in his article on Fort Colville in this issue. The other is Vancouver. Chief Factor John McLoughlin moved the Columbia River headquarters of the Hudson's Bay Company from Fort George (Astoria) to what he called Fort Vancouver in the spring of 1825. The village, now city, of Vancouver grew up alongside the Fort. It is the oldest continuous home of white men in the State of Washington. Its centennial ought to be marked by some ceremony or celebration.

The Pacific Wilderness Olympiad

Fifteen cities in view of the Olympic Mountains are working up interest in a great pageant as a tourist attraction for 1925. It is planned to weave some pioneer history and later progress into a story that will be successful in pageant form. The cities as listed in the advance literature are Olympia, Hoquiam, Aberdeen, Montesano, Elma, Chehalis, Centralia, Bremerton, Shelton, Port Angeles, Port Townsend, Port Orchard, Quilcene, Seattle, Tacoma.