

CORRECTIONS

Readers of Slovene Studies 9/1-2 (1987), the special issue Lubi Slovenci. A Festschrift to Honor Rado Lencek, should note the following two corrections:

On page 43, the last paragraph should be corrected:

Original:

The acrimonies that the age of nationalism kindled on both sides of the Drava need not dim the unique role that the people "of southern origin" played in Magyar history. That history is inconceivable with János Vitéz (Ivan Vitez of Sredna), Janus Pannonius (Ivan Česmički), . . ."

Correction:

The acrimonies that the age of nationalism kindled on both sides of the Drava need not dim the unique role that the people "of southern origin" played in Magyar history. That history is inconceivable without János Vitéz (Ivan Vitez of Sredna), Janus Pannonius (Ivan Česmički), . . ."

On page 44, the third paragraph should be corrected:

Original:

Among the politicians, acquaintance with Hungary was even rarer. Only a handful of Magyarophiles studied in Budapest (Bans Pejacsevich and Szkerlecz, but not Tomasich, Czuvaj, or Mihalovich). Most politicians did not even know Hungary. . . .

Correction:

Among the politicians, acquaintance with Hungary was even rarer. Only a handful of Magyarophiles studied in Budapest (Bans Pejacsevich and Szkerlecz, but not Tomasich, Czuvaj, or Mihalovich). Most politicians did not even know Hungarian. . . .