

Announcement

- ¶ A few copies of Governors of Washington are for sale by the Printing Department, University of Washington, at one dollar each. There is no purpose of making a profit in this case, but it is desired to recover cost of printing and binding. Each book is numbered and autographed.
- ¶ Readers will discover in this issue the first installment of another piece of research work devoted to the proposed Washington Constitution of 1878. While it was never put into force as the supreme law of the commonwealth, its framing and its contents reveal the political, social and economic thought of the time better than is done by any other form of literature. The material is almost inaccessible except in old newspaper collections. Mr. Clarence B. Bagley has been kind enough to loan the necessary papers from his valuable collection.
- ¶ The invitation is renewed for any who discover errors or omissions in the records under the title: "Origin of Washington Geographic Names," to communicate the same to the editor of this Quarterly without delay.
- ¶ President Henry Suzzallo of the University of Washington received the honorary degree, Doctor of Laws, at the recent semi-centennial celebration of the University of California.
