

Mount Baker Outing of 1920," by Jamieson Parker. It is a long article and profusely illustrated, as is the entire book. B. A. Thaxter writes on "The 1920 Ascent of Mount Shuksan," and R. H. Bunnage on "An Ascent of Ruth Mountain." One of the popular mountaineers of the Northwest, Richard W. Montague, has a brief article on the suggestive title: "Why Do We Come Back?" A review article, by Gertrude Metcalfe Sholes is entitled: "The Mount Baker Outing of the Mazamas in 1909." The most valuable article historically is "Mount Baker—Its Name and First Explorer" by Arthur J. Craven. He has used commendable diligence in collecting together the scant records of E. T. Coleman, who deserves a better place than has been accorded him heretofore in Northwestern annals. Charles F. Easton contributes a geological article on "The Story of Mount Baker."

The rest of the book is given to other mountaineering articles and the usual reports of officers.

Librarians and collectors of Northwest Americana will do well to save these beautiful and valuable publications.

While not in the field of the Quarterly, this book is mentioned for two reasons:—The author is a graduate of the University of Washington and he devotes pages 124-192 to a consideration of history as a required subject. There is an introduction by President G. Stanley Hall of Clark University in which that authority says that this book "represents better than anything I know the general principles of what I believe to be the education of the near future."

Ewing Young and His Estate. By FREDERIC G. YOUNG. (Portland: Oregon Historical Society, 1920. Pp. 171-315. Fifty cents.)

This is Volume XXI., Number 3, of The Quarterly of the Oregon Historical Society, but is mentioned here as a separate because it is devoted wholly to the item mentioned in the title. The first twenty-six pages are devoted to Professor Young's account of the romantic and important career of Ewing Young. The balance of the book is called an appendix and contains documents, such as letters, petitions and account books, all throwing light on the eco-
