¶ To complete a file for a large eastern library, we need Vol. I. No. 3 (April, 1907) and will pay two dollars for a copy of the Washington Historical Quarterly of that date.

¶ J. Neilson Barry, who furnishes for this issue the interesting material about Washington Irving and Astoria, is devoting much time to the Indians and early history of the Columbia River and the Northwest in general. His address is Route 5, Box 25-B, Portland, Oregon.

¶ D. A. Brown is Historian of the Skamania County Historical Society. His article in this issue on the White Salmon Blockhouse is in line with his active work for that vicinity.

¶ Readers will observe the contrast in the annuals of the plains contributed by Fred Lockley for the year 1844 and by J. Orin Oliphant for the year 1878.

¶ Awakening interest in the proceedings of the Washington Constitutional Convention of 1889 is referred to in the News Department and among the Book Reviews will be found reference to the fact that Oregon has just achieved the publication of the proceedings of that State's Convention of 1857.
