

important forts of the west is cordially welcomed into the literature of the Northwest. The author frankly says: "The author looks forward to the time (which it is understood is not far distant) when certain records of the Hudson's Bay Company are published. So soon as this event takes place, this brief history will probably have to be amplified in the light of the information which will then be available." This Lower Fort Garry, known to all early westerners as "The Stone Fort," is located twenty miles north of Winnipeg. It was begun in 1831 and completed in 1839. This little history is effectively illustrated.

The Astorians. By W. D. VINCENT. (Pullman: State College of Washington, 1928. Pp. 28. $1.00).

This is No. 3 in a series called "Contributions to the History of the Pacific Northwest." The Librarian of the State College of Washington has copies for exchange with libraries and other institutions. Collectors may purchase copies at the price indicated above.

Mr. Vincent has told the story of The Astorians in interesting, though very brief, form.

The Pacific Northwest and Alaska. By C. J. COLLINS. (Omaha: Union Pacific System, 1928. Pp. 48.)

This pamphlet bound in beautifully embossed paper is much more than a railroad folder and is well worth saving as an item in the literature of the Northwest. It is not revealed who wrote the book or compiled the information. It is copyrighted by Mr. Collins, General Passenger Agent of the Union Pacific System, and he is thus credited with the authorship. In addition to the useful information in the narrative, there are numerous beautiful illustrations and maps of the Pacific Northwest and Alaska. An invitation is appended for readers to send for other publications on such subjects as California, Yellowstone National Park and Unknown Places in Idaho.
