

the next volume of especial interest as it will surely cover the treaty of Ghent and the beginning of this century of peace in the early parts of which the Oregon Question was prominent.

THE MOUNTAINEER. Edited by Effie Louise Chapman. (Seattle, The Mountaineers, Incorporated, 1914. Pp. 104. Illustrated. 50 cents.)

This annual report of The Mountaineers is called Volume VII. It gives an account of the club's work for the year 1914, including full records of the outings on Mount Stuart in the Cascades and in Glacier National Park in Montana. Much of the park lies on the western slope of the old Rocky Mountain boundary and was thus once a part of Old Oregon and of Washington Territory (from 1853 to 1863). The pictures and descriptive articles give the book a permanent value.

MAZAMA. Edited by E. C. Sammons. Portland, Oregon, The Mazamas, 1914. Pp. 136.)

While this book is called Volume IV, Number 3, of the publications by The Mazamas, it really marks the twentieth year of the existence of that interesting mountain club. The book is twice the size of any of its predecessors and is packed with beautiful pictures and valuable articles about the wonderful mountains of the Pacific Northwest. Last year's outing was devoted to Mountain Rainier so that peak receives most attention. Other articles, however, help to widen the value of this important addition to the literature of the western mountains.
