

ume gives a record of the society's activities in the nine years since that event. It is to be hoped that the volumes will appear more frequently hereafter.

Instructors in History

Instructor Ralph H. Lutz of the University of Washington is at Stanford University for the present academic year, taking the place of Professor Edward B. Krehbiel, who is absent on leave. In his place at the University of Washington is Instructor Charles W. David, recently from the Universities of Wisconsin and Harvard.

Governors of Washington

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer is publishing as a feature of its daily editorial page a series of brief biographies of the "Governors of the Commonwealth of Washington." When completed there will be twenty-two such sketches, fourteen of Territorial and eight of State Governors.

The Columbia Highway

The completion of the Columbia Highway has been celebrated by the publication of a most beautiful book by Samuel Christopher Lancaster, Highway Engineer. The book is appropriately and lovingly dedicated to Samuel Hill, the well known advocate of good roads, who is given credit of having conceived the great highway. The book is most sumptuously illustrated, many of the plates being reproduced by a new process directly from natural colored photographs. The sheer beauty of the book will cause it to be cherished even by those who have not been privileged to see in nature the wonderful beauties it reveals, through the modern printer's skill.

Story of the Mercer Expeditions

The article in this Quarterly on the Mercer expeditions is of unusual value. Readers will discover that the author, Mrs. Engle, was a member of one of the expeditions. She writes from first hand information.
