

Announcement

¶ In this issue there is presented the first installment of the diary kept on Whidby Island by Col. and Mrs. I. N. Ebey. As Isaac Neff Ebey was the first permanent settler on that historic island the document is of prime importance to the history of Puget Sound and the State of Washington.

¶ It is a pleasure to present a book review by so great an authority as General Hiram M. Chittenden.

¶ While the series of biographical sketches of "Living Pioneers of Washington" has ceased in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, the collection of data by the History Department of the University of Washington continues. Efforts are being made to collect photographs and biographical records of all pioneers of Washington, living or dead. All such materials are being carefully filed in the archives at the University of Washington for the use of historians of this and subsequent generations.
