

foreword in which he says: "I perceive in this collection another link in the lengthening chain of our traditional story. The Great War has thrown the events of our early settlement suddenly into remote distance. It is as if an extra half-century had been abruptly interposed, and this added perspective has given us a new and keener interest in the beginnings of our nation."

---

The Huguenot-Walloon New Netherland Commission, Inc. (New York: The Commission, 1924. Pp. 48.)

Those who have noticed the memorial tercentenary stamps on recent letters will be interested in the beautifully illustrated pamphlet to call attention to the three hundred years of contribution to American life by the Huguenots and Walloons. The illustrations comprise reproductions of old paintings and engravings to which are added portraits of such modern characters as the Queen of the Netherlands, the King of the Belgians, the President of France, President Harding and President Coolidge. The headquarters of the Commission are at 105 East Twenty-second Street, New York.

British Columbia Historical Association, First Annual Report and Proceedings. (Victoria, B. C.: 1924. Pp. 34.)

In addition to the constitution, list of members, secretary's report and other proceedings the pamphlet contains "The Earliest Pages of the History of British Columbia," the Presidential Address by Judge F. W. Howay; "The Pioneer Press of British Columbia," by J. Forsyth; "Thomas Muir, Scottish Political Martyr, and His Connection with Vancouver Island," by John Hosie.

---

Les Origines de la Doctrine de Monroe. By S. E. MORISON. (Paris: Revue des Sciences Politiques, Jan.-Mar. 1924. Pp. 52-84.)

This reprint is by S. E. Morison, Harmsworth Professor of American History, Oxford, England. The author is well known to readers of the Washington Historical Quarterly. It is a pleasure to note his success in the great English University.

---

The Future of Rotary. By FRANK H. LAMB. (Hoquiam, Washington, 1924. Pp. 16.)

Mr. Lamb is Third Vice-President of Rotary International.