Chronology of Woodrow Wilson. Compiled for MARY VANDERPOOL PENNINGTON by JOHN RANDOLPH BOLLING and others. (New York: Frederick A. Stokes Company, 1927. Pp. 383. $3.50.)

The preface states: "It is often asked what Woodrow Wilson did that he became the universally acknowledged dominating world figure during the Great War, and what entitles him to rank forever among the foremost of mankind. This publication undertakes to answer this question in as brief and concise a form as can possibly be put forward, giving only easily accessible and verifiable Facts and Dates relating thereto."

In addition to the compact chronological table, occupying one-half of the book, there is a summary of his life, a list of honors conferred upon him and selections of his most important addresses.

An American Soldier and Diplomat, Horace Porter. By ELSIE PORTER MENDE, in collaboration with HENRY GREENLEAF PEARSON. (New York: Frederick A. Stokes Company, 1927. Pp. 390. $5.00.)

Mrs. Mende is the daughter of General Horace Porter and has here prepared a literary monument to her distinguished father. As an aide to General Grant and later as Secretary to President Grant, General Porter's activities enlighten the annals of the American Civil War. As successful diplomat he saw much of the developments that led to the Great World War.

Although his career was national and international in its scope, it did not touch directly the Pacific Northwest. Still, a maritime people, having contacts with the United States Navy, are sure to be interested in Chapter XXI. of this book. It relates the remarkable achievement by America's Ambassador to France, General Horace Porter, in finding and rescuing the remains of John Paul Jones, America's first naval hero, more than a century after burial in an obscure Paris cemetery. Two republics thrilled over tardy pageantry. Even the participants
