Announcements

- ¶ The History of Science in Washington series is continued in this issue. Professor Rigg furnishes the article on Botany and Professor Benson the one on Chemistry. Other articles to complete the series are in course of preparation and will be resumed in the issue for January, 1930.
- ¶ The October issue will be devoted to the second decennial index. The first decennial index proved of great use in all libraries where bound volumes of the Quarterly are being used. The completion of the twentieth volume with a similar aid will surely be welcomed.
- ¶ When the twenty-first volume is begun it will undoubtedly become necessary to advance the price for the earliest volumes the supply running low.
- ¶ Three articles in this issue are by graduate students in the Department of History, University of Washington as follows: "Anti-Chinese Riots in Washington" by B. P. Wilcox; "Fort Benton's Part in the Development of the West," by Asa A. Wood; and "The History of Tatoosh Island" by Winifred Elyea. Mr. Wilcox is Superintendent of Schools at Castle Rock, Washington. Members of his family were on the side of law and order during the riots he has discussed.
- ¶ Mrs. Rosetta W. Hewitt, while but one year of age, crossed the plains with the family of her father, Victor M. Wallace in 1847. Her article on Joseph L. Meek will interest pioneers.
- ¶ Albert B. Reagan has been in the Indian Service for many years, part of the time with the Quillayutes whose traditions he here relates.
