- ¶ Edmund T. Coleman is famous as having made the first ascent of Mount Baker. His article on "Puget Sound and the Northern Pacific Railroad" is rescued from a special English publication of 1875 entitled Illustrated Travels, found in the papers of the well known pioneer, Edward Huggins.
- ¶ Kenneth W. Porter gleaned the materials used in his article in this issue while preparing his fine two-volume work, John Jacob Astor, Business Man, beginning the series, "Harvard Studies in Business History." That work was reviewed in this Quarterly for April, 1932. We are fortunate in securing this addition to the records of the Astoria enterprise.
- ¶ Alfred Tunem's study of the San Juan Islands Dispute is completed in this issue. His thesis was amplified by an appendix and an extensive bibliography of which only part of the appendix is reproduced in this printing.
- ¶ The Book Reviews and News Department contain many items in this issue worth the attention of collectors in the field of Pacific Northwest Americana.
- ¶ This issue completes Volume XXIII. There are already in view attractive articles for the ensuing numbers.
