

death. As now published it has been edited with considerable excision and supplied with an admirable foreword by Alfred Powers. There are serious faults of taste and no great literary merit in the story yet one is inclined to commend its publication. The most interesting facts which emerge in the book have to do with the character of the author, surely a more appealing one than any he was able to create. The unwritten tragedy to be read between the lines is that of a valuable creative impulse, weakened and distorted by the combined influences of a narrow religious and social environment, by physical hardship, and possibly by intellectual and emotional malnutrition. Here is another of the countless fatalities accompanying the Westward movement.
