Honoring Professor Turner

Professor Joseph Schafer, Superintendent of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin, under the title of Editorial Comment in the Wisconsin Magazine of History for June, 1933, pays a fine tribute to Professor Frederick Jackson Turner, calling it "Turner's Frontier Philosophy." He says: "Turner, let us again remind ourselves, applied the frontier theory especially to the period which closed with the frontier's disappearance. He never claimed to have discovered in the frontier philosophy a universal solvent for American historical problems. His mind was almost uniquely free from dogmatism."

Memories of Astoria

G. H. Lash, Press Representative of the Canadian National Railways, in his bulletin for July 15, 1933, calls attention to the fact that in Jasper National Park there are three names in memory of Astorians who returned home by that route: Touquin Valley, named for the vessel that was blown up soon after establishing Astoria, a river bears the name Astoria, and a mountain is named for Gabriel Franchere, the clerk, whose book was largely used by Washington Irving in his Astoria.

Statue of Harvey W. Scott

On July 22 there was unveiled in the City of Portland a statue of Harvey W. Scott, who for forty years was the forceful and famous editor of the Portland Oregonian. It is a gift from the Scott family. The statue is the work of Gutzon Borglum, the famous sculptor whose full name is John Gutzon de la Mothe Borglum. He was born in Idaho but maintains his home in Stamford, Connecticut, with a winter residence in San Antonio, Texas. He has won honors in various art centers of the world. At the presentation ceremonies Governor Julius L. Meier presided. The speakers included Chester Rowell, Editor of the San Francisco Chronicle; Dr. Joseph Schafer, Superintendent of the Wisconsin State Historical Society; and Rev. J. Whitcomb Brouger, D.D., Pastor of the Fremont Temple
