Announcements

- ¶ Alaska retains attractions in history as in gold, furs and fish. Mr. Andrews, whose work is familiar to our readers, gives us a study of Russian shipbuilding in Alaska.
- ¶ Walter N. Sage, Professor of History in the University of British Columbia, gives an interesting record of fur-trader experiences a century ago.
- ¶ Professor J. Orin Oliphant reveals a striving for literature among the early fur traders.
- ¶ J. F. Santee is known to the readers of the Oregon Historical Quarterly and the New Mexico Historical Review. He now appears in the Washington Historical Quarterly with an article evaluating Chief Lawyer of the Nez Percés.
- ¶ Harry Hobucket writes of his own people, the Quillayute. He has inherited high rank in that tribe. His uncle, Luke Hobucket, was well known as Indian Policeman at LaPush in the early years of this century.
- ¶ W. P. Bonney, a contributing editor of this Quarterly, is Secretary of the Washington State Historical Society, from whose archives he has transcribed the Document for this issue.
- ¶ Volume XXV. begins with this number.
