

Charles Bukowski is professor of international studies and director of the Institute of International Studies at Bradley University, Peoria, Illinois. He was a senior Fulbright Lecturer in international relations at the University of Ljubljana in 1994. His current research focuses on Slovenia's foreign policy. His most recent publications include Small States in the Post-Cold War World: Slovenia and NATO Enlargement (co-edited with Zlatko Šabič), and "Ten Years of Slovenian Foreign Policy" (Slovene Studies 22.1–2).

John K. Cox is associate professor of history at Wheeling Jesuit University. He is the author of The History of Serbia (2002) and of Slovenia: Evolving Loyalties (forthcoming). He is currently writing a study of the works of Ismail Kadare. His chief research interests lie in Balkan and Central European intellectual history.

Joseph L. Derdzinski is a U.S. Air Force officer and Ph.D. candidate in International Studies at The University of Denver. He has served in the USAF's Office of Special Investigations in Germany and the UK, working with law enforcement services of those countries. He was in the first U.S. military contingent during NATO's implementation of the Dayton Accords. His research is on security in the Balkans and Eastern Europe and democratic consolidation in post-authoritarian states.

Ervin Dolenc is a researcher at the Institute for Contemporary History in Ljubljana. He is the author of articles and books on Slovenian political and cultural history between the World Wars.

James Gow is chair of International Peace and Security, King's College London. He is author, among other works, of Defending the West (2004) and co-author with Cathie Carmichael of Slovenia and the Slovenes: A Small State in the New Europe (2000).

Erin F. Labbie is assistant professor in the Department of English at Bowling Green State University where she teaches courses on Medieval Studies and Critical Theory. She has published essays on Medieval literature and eighteenth-century literature. Her book Lacan's Medievalism is forthcoming with the University of Minnesota Press. She may be reached on e-mail at labbie@bgnet.bgsu.edu.

Milica Trebše Štolfa is an archival counselor, retired from the Regional Archives in Koper, Slovenia. Her primary areas of interest are Slovene emigration, in particular to Canada, and preservation of materials relating to Slovene immigrants in North America.

Peter Vodopivec was professor of European and American History at the University of Ljubljana until 1999. Since 1999 he has been a scientific counselor at the Institute for Modern History in Ljubljana. He is the author of numerous articles and publications on Slovene, Austrian, French, and Central European history.

Notes

Notes