

ARTICLES:

Charles Bukowski , Ten Years of Slovenian Foreign Policy: A Small State Encounters the World	3
Tatiana Bajuk Senčar , The Making of History: Discourses of Democracy and Nation in Slovenia	35
Raymond H. Miller , Venelin and the Slovenes	63
Božo Repe , Slovenia: From Communism toward Democracy 1980–2000	91
Tina Bahovec , Some Examples of Slovene-German Conflict in Austria between the First and Second World Wars	101
Arthur J. Vidich , Recollections of a Slovene Boyhood in America	119

REVIEWS:

Irene Portis-Winner . Semiotics of Peasants in Transition: Slovene Villagers and Their Ethnic Relatives in America (Arthur J. Vidich)	169
Davorin Kračun . Economics of Transition: Stabilization and Economic Performance (Peter Mikek)	175
Jan Morris . Trieste and the Meaning of Nowhere (Tom Ložar)	177

Zlatko Skrbis. Long-distance Nationalism: Diasporas, Homelands and Identities (John K. Cox)	188
Brian J. Požun. Shedding the Balkan Skin: Slovenia's Quiet Emergence in the New Europe (Tom Ložar)	192
OUR CONTRIBUTORS	197

Journal of Balkan Studies, ISSN 0021-910X, published quarterly by Cambridge University Press
© 2000 Cambridge University Press. Printed in Great Britain by Bell & Bain Ltd, Glasgow.

Journal of Balkan Studies is a refereed journal publishing original research articles on Balkan history, politics, society and international relations. It also includes book reviews, short notices of new publications, and occasional special issues. The journal is interdisciplinary in nature, reflecting the broad range of research interests in the Balkans. It is open to contributions from scholars in all disciplines, including history, political science, geography, economics, sociology, anthropology, literature, and linguistics. The journal is also interested in contributions from scholars in related fields such as law, international relations, and cultural studies. The journal is committed to the promotion of research on the Balkans and to the dissemination of knowledge about the region. The journal is also interested in contributions from scholars in related fields such as law, international relations, and cultural studies. The journal is committed to the promotion of research on the Balkans and to the dissemination of knowledge about the region.

Journal of Balkan Studies is a refereed journal publishing original research articles on Balkan history, politics, society and international relations. It also includes book reviews, short notices of new publications, and occasional special issues. The journal is interdisciplinary in nature, reflecting the broad range of research interests in the Balkans. It is open to contributions from scholars in all disciplines, including history, political science, geography, economics, sociology, anthropology, literature, and linguistics. The journal is also interested in contributions from scholars in related fields such as law, international relations, and cultural studies. The journal is committed to the promotion of research on the Balkans and to the dissemination of knowledge about the region. The journal is also interested in contributions from scholars in related fields such as law, international relations, and cultural studies. The journal is committed to the promotion of research on the Balkans and to the dissemination of knowledge about the region.

Journal of Balkan Studies is a refereed journal publishing original research articles on Balkan history, politics, society and international relations. It also includes book reviews, short notices of new publications, and occasional special issues. The journal is interdisciplinary in nature, reflecting the broad range of research interests in the Balkans. It is open to contributions from scholars in all disciplines, including history, political science, geography, economics, sociology, anthropology, literature, and linguistics. The journal is also interested in contributions from scholars in related fields such as law, international relations, and cultural studies. The journal is committed to the promotion of research on the Balkans and to the dissemination of knowledge about the region. The journal is also interested in contributions from scholars in related fields such as law, international relations, and cultural studies. The journal is committed to the promotion of research on the Balkans and to the dissemination of knowledge about the region.

Journal of Balkan Studies is a refereed journal publishing original research articles on Balkan history, politics, society and international relations. It also includes book reviews, short notices of new publications, and occasional special issues. The journal is interdisciplinary in nature, reflecting the broad range of research interests in the Balkans. It is open to contributions from scholars in all disciplines, including history, political science, geography, economics, sociology, anthropology, literature, and linguistics. The journal is also interested in contributions from scholars in related fields such as law, international relations, and cultural studies. The journal is committed to the promotion of research on the Balkans and to the dissemination of knowledge about the region. The journal is also interested in contributions from scholars in related fields such as law, international relations, and cultural studies. The journal is committed to the promotion of research on the Balkans and to the dissemination of knowledge about the region.