

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Danica Čerče is an associate professor of literatures in English, at the Faculty of Economics, University of Ljubljana. Her field of research includes American and Australian literatures, and translation studies. She is the author of Pripovedništvo Johna Steinbecka (2006) and Reading Steinbeck in Eastern Europe (2012), and book chapters and articles published in academic journals in Slovenia and abroad. She is on the editorial board of Coolabar and Steinbeck Review, and a vice-president of the International Society of Steinbeck Scholars. danica.cerce@ef.uni-lj.si

Andreas Leben is professor in the Department of Slavonic Studies at the Karl-Franzens-University of Graz. His focus is on twentieth- and twenty-first-century Slovenian literature, autobiographical writing, and cultural transfer, as well as on the literature of the Slovene minority in Austria. Recent publications include Alenka Koron, Andrej Leben (eds.): Avtobiografski diskurz (2011); Andreas Leben, Martina Orožen, Erich Prunč (eds.): Beiträge zur interdisziplinären Slowenistik / Prispevki k meddisciplinarni slovenistiki. Festschrift für Ludwig Karničar zum 65. Geburtstag (2014); Ludwig Karničar, Andreas Leben (eds.): Slowenen und Graz – Gradec in Slovenci (2014). andreas.leben@uni-graz.at

Urška Perenič is a faculty member in the Department of Slovene Literature at the University of Ljubljana. She specializes in the theory and methodology of empirical literary studies and carries out concrete empirical projects. She also does research on nineteenth- and twentieth-century Slovene literature, in particular narrative techniques and social forms of literary life. Her recent research is in interdisciplinary, spacial literary study of the socio-geographical space and the development of Slovene literature. Her publications in this area analyze spatial data from the biographies of individuals and institutions of importance in Slovene literary history. urska.perenic@gmail.com

Karl Ryavec (Rijavec) is emeritus professor of political science at the University of Massachusetts – Amherst, where he taught courses in Russian and East European politics, retiring in 2002. Two of his books are: United States-Soviet Relations (Longman 1989) and Russian Bureaucracy (Rowman & Littlefield 2003). He received M.A. and Ph.D. degrees as well as the Certificate of the Russian Institute from Columbia University. He served as a navy communications officer on a destroyer escort in the Pacific and in the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (now part of the Department of State). He lives in Pelham, Massachusetts with his wife Isabel. ryavec@polsci.umass.edu