

Andreas Leben is a professor in the Department of Slavonic Studies at the Karl-Franzens-University of Graz. His interest is focused on twentieth and twenty-first-century Slovenian literature, autobiographical writing, and cultural transfer as well as on the literature of Slovene minority in Austria. Some recent publications: Alenka Koron, Andrej Leben (eds.): Avtobiografski diskurz (2011); Andreas Leben, Martina Orožen, Erich Prunč (eds.): Beiträge zur interdisziplinären Slowenistik / Prispevki k meddisciplinarni slovenistiki. Festschrift für Ludwig Karničar zum 65. Geburtstag (2014); Ludwig Karničar, Andreas Leben (eds.): Slowenen und Graz – Gradec in Slovenci (2014).

Tom Priestly is emeritus professor of Russian and Slavic Linguistics at the University of Alberta. He was president of the Society for Slovene Studies, 1995–98. He has translated, mainly poetry, from Slovene to English: in 2016 he published The Last Temptation of Sergij, his translation of Jani Virk's Zadnja Sergijeva skušnjava. His major research focus since the 1970s has been the language in Sele/Zell, a Slovene minority village in Carinthia, Austria.

Carole Rogel is retired from Ohio State University, where she taught history for twenty-six years. In addition to numerous articles, she has published The Slovenes and Yugoslavism 1890-1914 (1977), The Breakup of Yugoslavia and the War in Bosnia (1998), and The Breakup of Yugoslavia and Its Aftermath (2004). She co-authored with Leopoldina Plut-Prelgelj Historical Dictionary of Slovenia (1996), (2nd edition 2007), paperback edition (2010) issued as The A to Z of Slovenia.