

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Maruša Čop and Zarja Križnik (2001) are Master's students at the Faculty of Arts, University of Ljubljana, where they study English and German Language and Literature. They regularly work on various projects at the faculty, ranging from English linguistics and historical linguistics to translation and creative writing. marusa.cop@gmail.com. zarja.kriznik@gmail.com.

Janko Kos became a professor of literary theory at the University of Ljubljana in 1970 and is a member of the Slovenian Academy of Sciences and Arts. He has published widely on Slovene literary history, especially lyric poetry and the novel. Some of his most well-known books are devoted to Francè Prešeren, Matija Čop, and Valentin Vodnik. He was also an editor of prominent journals in the 1950s and 1960s.

Dimitrij Rupel is a writer, editor, and politician. Author of numerous critical and fictional works, his latest novel is entitled Bazar (2021). Rupel holds a Ph.D. in sociology from Brandeis University. He has served as a representative in the Republic of Slovenia's legislature, minister of foreign affairs, mayor of Ljubljana, ambassador to the United States, and head of the Slovenian Book Agency.