

THE CONTRIBUTORS

HENRY R. COOPER, JR., is an assistant professor of Slavic literatures at Northwestern University. In addition to editing Slovene Studies: The Journal of the Society for Slovene Studies, he has published a monograph on Francè Prešeren, a bibliography of the Igor' Tale, and articles, reviews and notes on Russian, Polish, Slovene, Serbo-Croatian and Bulgarian topics.

WILLIAM W. DERBYSHIRE is professor of Slavic Languages and chairman of the Department of Slavic Languages and Literatures of Rutgers University, New Brunswick, NJ. He has published a number of works on various aspects of homonymy in Slavic languages. Recently, he has translated Rajko Nahtigal's Slovanski jeziki into English.

RADO L. LENCEK is professor of Slavic languages at Columbia University. His specialty is Slavic Languages and cultures. He is the author of The Verb Pattern of Contemporary Standard Slovene (Otto Harrassowitz, 1966), the Introduction to the Slovene Language (Slavica Publishers, 1981), and a number of studies in scholarly publications.

IRMA M. A. OZBALT is a language training officer at the Public Service Commission of Canada Language Training Centre in Montreal. She graduated from Ljubljana University, and obtained her M.A. and Ph.D. from McGill University. She specializes in Slovene language and literature. Currently, she is preparing Functional Slovene, a basic course in Slovene as a foreign language, as well as an anthology of modern Slovene short stories.

RUDOLPH M. SUSEL, Ph.D., has been the editor of the newspaper Ameriška domovina since July 1979, and has written extensively on problems of Slovene history.