

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Tina Bahovec is an assistant at the Institute of History, Department of History of Eastern and Southeastern Europe, at the University of Klagenfurt. Her areas of research are Slovene and Yugoslav history and the history of the Alpine-Adriatic region. Her dissertation and other publications are on the Carinthian Slovenes in the interwar period.

Charles Bukowski is professor of international studies and director of the Institute of International Studies at Bradley University, Peoria, Illinois. He was a senior Fulbright Lecturer in international relations at the University of Ljubljana in 1994. His most recent publications have focused on Slovenia's transition from communist rule and the consolidation of its democracy. His most recent book (co-edited with Zlatko Šabič) is titled Small States in the Post-Cold War World: Slovenia and NATO Enlargement.

Raymond H. Miller is an associate professor of Russian at Bowdoin College, where he teaches Russian language and literature, as well as Slavic cultural history. His main research interests are Russian and western Slavic contacts in the first half of the nineteenth century, and Slavic historical linguistics. He is currently working on a biography of Jernej Kopitar.

Božo Repe is a faculty member in the Department of History at the University of Ljubljana. He has authored over one hundred and fifty publications on contemporary Slovene history. His most recent book is Jutri je nov dan: Slovenci in razpad Jugoslavije (2002).

Tatiana Bajuk Senčar is a researcher at the Scientific Research Center of the Slovenian Academy of Sciences and Arts in Ljubljana. She is carrying out research, funded by the Research Support Scheme of the Soros Foundation, on the relationship between economics and culture in constructions of Slovene national identity.

Arthur J. Vidich is professor emeritus at the New School University, where he has been a faculty member since 1960. He received his Ph.D. from Harvard University in social anthropology in 1953. His current research topics are American democracy, the political economy of Thorstein Veblen, irrationality in modern society, and processes of globalization.